I see people standing in line.

I see the word unemployed.

I think they are waiting for free food because I see a sign above the building.

I think they look very serious because I don't see any smiles.

I think they might be sad because I see that they are standing in line for free food because they don't have jobs.

I think this happened a long time ago because I see a B&W photo.

I think it might be during The Great Depression because I see something a lot of people without jobs standing in line.
